09.00 for 09.30 start – 17.00

Reviewing the Past to prepare for the Future Introducing ICA's Technology of Participation (TOP) – Tools for dialogue, learning, consensus & change Presented by Martin Gilbraith

This one-day tailored master-class will be suitable for all those who want to be able to involve people more effectively in dialogue, learning, consensus & change, including team leaders and managers within organisations, those working with boards, management teams, partnerships and external stakeholders, youth and community workers and independent facilitators. The methods will be presented in a practical and participatory way. Three methods will be demonstrated in turn in practice, each followed by an explanation of the method and an exploration of how it may be applied in participants' own situations.

Questions this workshop answers

- ✚ “How can I enable more purposeful & productive conversations, bring out the wisdom of a group and reach shared awareness and new insight in meetings?”
- ✚ How can I help a group take a comprehensive and long-term strategic view - to learn from the past, appreciate the present and anticipate the future?
- ✚ How can I enable a group to come to a common vision, a deeper understanding of its current reality and a real sense of ownership and commitment to a shared way forward - so that for once their plans actually deliver the change that they are seeking?”

Martin Gilbraith CPF is an independent facilitator, trainer and consultant based in London.
